In 1940, Hughes's autobiography up to age 28, The Big Sea, was published. Also around this time, Hughes began contributing a column to the Chicago Defender , for which he created a comic character named Jesse B. Semple, better known as "Simple," a black Everyman that Hughes used to further explore urban, working-class black themes, and to address racial issues. The columns were highly successful, and "Simple" would later be the focus of several of Hughes's books and plays.  Summarize paragraph 6 in a ten or more word sentence.:  In the late 1940s, Hughes contributed the lyrics for a Broadway musical titled Street Scene , which featured music by Kurt Well. The success of the musical would earn Hughes enough money that he was finally able to buy a house in Harlem. Around this time, he also taught creative writing at Atlanta University and was a guest lecturer at a university in Chicago for several months.  Summarize paragraph 7 in a ten or more word sentence.:  Over the next two decades, Hughes would continue his prolific output. In 1949 he wrote a play that inspired the opera Troubled Island and published yet another anthology of work. The Poetry of the Negro . During the 1950s and 1950s he published countless other works, including several books in his "Simple's series, English transiations of the poetry of Federico Garcia Lorca and Gabriela Mistral, another anthology of his own poetry, and the second installment of his autobiography. I Wonder as I Wander . ## Quotes by Langston Hughes

"Life is for the living.

Death is for the dead.

Let life be like music.

And death a note unsaid."

— Langston Hughes, The Collected Poems

I like to work, read, learn, and understand life."

"I have discovered in life that there are ways of getting almost anywhere you want to go, if you really want to go."

Langston Hughes

What happens to a dream deferred?

Does it dry up like a raisin in the sun? Or fester like a sore--And then run? Does it stink like rotten meat? Or crust and sugar over-like a syrupy sweet?

Maybe it just sags like a heavy load.

Or does it explode?"

— Langston Hughes, The Collected Poems
